AMA KARIKARI-YAWSON

Ama KariKari-Yawson is the founder of Milestales and the Author of Sunne's Gift. She earned a BA cum laude from Harvard University, an MBA from the Wharton School and a JD from the University of Pennsylvania Law School. She has worked in investment banking and legal capacities for Bank of America and Cleary Gottlieb Steen & Hamilton.

Her unique understanding of social issues, business and law allows her to be a sought after contributor to The Huffington Post, The Atlantic, The Griot and other publications. Ms. Karikari-Yawson has also appeared on the Today Show, Al-Jazeera's The Stream, The Nate Berkus Show and Fox Business.

In 2013, a painful experience in which a barber called her son a racial pejorative term and said that her son's hair was not pretty, inspired Ms. Yawson to begin writing children's books. Her first best-selling fable, Sunne's Gift, is about a magical being (magbee) with spirally hair that grows toward the sun named Sunne. Sunne's three straight-haired siblings, who also have magical powers, poke fun of Sunne's hair. Sunne starts beating the spirals of hair to fit in, but as result...

Ms. Karikari-Yawson now tours the country performing Sunne's Gift during workshops that aim at healing, awareness and collective improvement through her firm Milestales. Milestales provides empowering narratives that enable people to soar to new levels.
